Full Legislature still must vote
after Jeffco delegation's OK

By KIM CHANDLER and JOSEPH D. BRYANT
News staff writers

The Jefferson County legislative delegation on Wednesday approved a bill that would increase the pay for Birmingham's mayor by $45,000 to $133,000 a year.

The bill also would allow the Birmingham City Council to set its own salary.

The legislation now moves to the floor of the state House of Representatives and still is subject to approval by the House and Senate.

A raise for Birmingham Mayor Larry Langford would take effect the month after it passes. The current council could approve an increase in its pay, but that would not take effect until the next council is elected in 2009.

Sponsor says mayoral salaries unfair

The bill's sponsor, Rep. John Rogers, D-Birmingham, said it's unfair that mayors of smaller cities make more than the mayor of Alabama's largest city.

Birmingham's mayor now ranks third in pay in Jefferson and Shelby counties, earning $87,995. The highest paid is Pelham Mayor Bobby Hayes, who makes $105,923 a year, but the Pelham mayor's total pay will drop to $90,120 after the next election, in August. Hoover Mayor Tony Petelos makes $96,000 a year in salary and expenses.

The Birmingham mayor's salary was set at $58,000 in 1955, and a $20,000-a-year expense discretionary account was added later. Rogers' bill would add $45,000 to Langford's expense account. Beginning with the next term, the pay would be restructured as a $83,000 salary and $40,000 expense allowance.
